Dear Jason:

Your Cause Kicks Ass!!

As a devoted follower of yours for the past year (not in a creepy David Koresh or Jim Jones kind of way), I've come to admire and appreciate your "tell it like it is, take no prisoners" approach to writing and life. So imagine my delight when I read about your Black Friday sale and purchased my own copy of "How to Get Kick Ass Clients".

As a new writer, I've spent a fair amount of time wondering how to get started and get paid in this unfamiliar territory. As you can imagine, I've received all kinds of advice from lots of writers and well-meaning people who've been doing this far longer than I have. By far, the BEST advice and the best gift I gave myself was to purchase your course.

After devouring all of the info (and taking lots of notes), it's a relief to know that I don't have to beg, cajole or bribe people to hire me, even though I'm new to the field. It's good to know it's not only OK, but paramount to my long-term success, to be picky about the assignments (and the clients) I choose to work with.

It feels good to tell myself, "You're worth more than you thought - don't sell yourself short."

"How to Get Kick Ass Clients" was worth every penny, even at full price - I gotta admit, though, I don't mind getting a deal. I
